Ganoderma Spores - The Ganoderma mushroom is one of the oldest mushrooms to be used in Chinese herbalism, ranking close to ginseng for years of usage. It is one of the most researched mushrooms, partly because in Ganoderma there are substances called triterpenes. These are found in many foods and plants like honey, apples, and cranberries. There are 50 of these substances that are exclusively found in Ganoderma mushrooms. When the Ganoderma lucidum matures, it releases spores which are used for our Premium Organo King of Coffee.

DID YOU KNOW?

Ganoderma spores are expensive not just because of their nutrients, but also because harvesting them has to be timed just right and how the spores are ‘opened’ directly impacts the quality.

A ganoderma lucidum takes about 5-7 months to mature. When it does, it will release spores in a most amazing array of nature. The spores are released from the underside of the mushroom and cover the entire mushroom within a few minutes and after a few hours the entire micro-environment is covered by spores. It takes almost 2000 pounds of spores to make 2 pounds of spore powder.

Spores are impossible for humans to digest due to their hard coating. In order to open, they must be carefully “cracked” and not spill out any of their precious and microscopic contents so that our bodies can digest the spores.

Organo™ Ganoderma spores are made in a unique way where the outer shell and inner protective lining of the spore are both ‘cracked’ to ensure clean, pure spore powder. Other companies can do a simple one crack process that allows some of the inner shell to be included in the powder, making it less pure. Additionally, the Organo™ spore powder is certified Organic.

Organo™ Premium Gourmet Organic King Of Coffee – provides Organic coffee, Organic and powerful Ganoderma spores for a daily beverage.
