DID YOU KNOW?

Retinol is a form of vitamin A, and is a pure form of the vitamin found in green and yellow vegetables, egg yolks, whole milk, beef, chicken, and fish-liver oil. It's essential to vision and bone development and plays a role in vision health.

Topically, Retinol is also hugely popular in skin care products because the skin naturally converts it to retinoic acid, which helps to stimulate collagen production, increase the skin's revitalization, and decrease pore size, creating softer, smoother skin.

Retinyl palmitate is considered to be a gentler, milder form of vitamin A. A combination of retinol and palmitic acid has been found in studies to be an effective antioxidant. The skin must first convert it to retinol, then retinoic acid, for it to have the same anti-aging effects, so higher concentrations are used to stimulate skin repair.
